IMKEWOELK + Partner is an architectural practice in Berlin founded 1997 by Imke Woelk. It brings together architecture and art, planning praxis and research. "We regard the world as a force field between urbanization and nature, ecology and material, flexibility and individuality". Each of their projects is a nodal point of relationships that can be understood as a whole or in terms of its various dimensions: as idea, as art, as technical solution, as social field. They therefore conceive large as well as small projects: urban development planning, utility studies, individual buildings, exhibition architecture, design objects, research projects, and publications. Central to their work is a confrontation with open space. Not as a neutral surface, but instead as an ambiguous space that must be understood simultaneously as abstract idea and concrete materialization.
