Out of 10 young offices which participated in the European Austria, the Institute of Urbanism chose Kune Office to teach Workshop 3.

„In this workshop, we would like to think that our streets can do more than just fulfil their strict urban role. They can be museums, supermarkets, greenhouses, theatres, 4.0 Industries, power stations, university classrooms, catwalks, libraries, sports centres or farms! The main question in which the workshop wants to focus, is in how many different ways one same urban element can be seen. The urban element we choose is the street, as one of the basic ones that constitute urban environments, and our strategy is to grant it with an infinite number of possibilities. These possibilities will have the same purpose: address the productive city. How can we transform a common suburbia street to a productive suburbia street?

Each day of the workshop different layers and tools will be added to deal with the complexity of the urban fabric under a creative point of view. Design, Management and policies, neighbours and passers-by, urban elements and nature, productiveness and economy, mobility and infrastructure, energy and technology can only be some of the layers to be considered and worked in.“
