Jonathan Sergison was born in 1964 at St. Asaph, Wales.

Together with Stephen Bates, he established Sergison Bates Architects in 1996. The practice works at different scales and their projects range from urban planning to public buildings and housing in the UK and abroad. In 2006, they were awarded the Heinrich Tessenow and the Erich Schelling Medals for Architecture, and many of their buildings have won recognition, including three RIBA Awards.

Having taught at a number of prestigious schools of architecture, Jonathan Sergison is currently Professor of Architectural Design at the Accademia di Architettura at Mendrisio, Switzerland. In addition to his academic commitments, he lectures and writes on architecture.
