

Michael Kriechbaum Michael Kriechbaum Michael Kriechbaum is a senior researcher who holds bachelor degrees in Environmental Systems Sciences (Geography and Economics), a master degree in Sustainable Development, and a PhD in Sustainability-oriented Management. He attained his degrees at the University of Graz, but spent exchange and research stays at the University of the Pacific (USA), Utrecht University (NED), University of Stellenbosch (RSA), and the Technical University of Madrid (ESP). His research focuses on the interaction between sustainable innovations and social change. Among other things, he currently leads a project on hydrogen futures funded by the Austrian Science Fund (FWF).

Main fields of research

Sustainable innovation; socio-technical change; Energy policy; Technological Expectations