Useful information

There are two types for leases: temporary (befristete) or permanent (unbefristete) leases.

Fixed-term (temporary) leases can generally be renewed through a written (formal letter) request for an agreed-upon term. In the case of primary rental leases, a minimal rental period of three years must be offered (according to the Rental Act); beyond this period, no limits are set. In the case of an extension of a fixed-term lease agreement, this minimum three-year term must also be honoured. Tenants are not, however, bound to the legally required three-year rental term. It is always possible to cancel the lease, but generally a three-month notice is necessary.

The average housing costs in Graz are € 12.12 per square meter (m²). The rental price depends on several factors, including age of the building, proximity to public transportation, infrastructure, and particular characteristics of the residential area or building. Additional costs must be considered in addition to the rental price: heating costs, gas and electricity costs, operating costs.
