vortrag

Aus der
Vorlesungsreihe
der TU Graz

Although sometimes forgotten, traffic spaces are also public spaces. That is, spaces shared by different users. Public space may not be defined as a place to park personal property or a place dominated by a particular type of user. In fact, it is rarely perceived or treated as a space for everyone with a place for ecology and quality of life. The lecture will attempt to show how to transform these spaces through pioneering examples, but will also highlight the pitfalls to be avoided and the role of research in moving towards a more equitable sharing of space. (This talk will be given in English.)
